

The new gowns of the season prevailed at the dance Friday evening and many were dreams of beauty—while the wearers were standing still. But if there is one thing for which the modified Directoire is not adapted, it is dancing. It might do for a stately minuet or some such movement as was the fashion in the time of the Louis—but for a two-step or waltz, not to mention the modern barn dance, they are not in it with the short length dancing frock of a year or so ago.

It seems unfortunate that the mid-week luncheons at the Country club should have been discontinued so early in the season. The members were suddenly awakened to the fact that they were extremely popular only last week, and now they find they are over, and one must plan a luncheon if one would eat it. The resort managers are not the only ones who fail to realize that Salt Lake's climate comes along about this time.

Golf is absorbing the time and attention of a goodly number of the women these days, and many are growing strong and robust on the game which is the king of outdoor sports. The September play in the women's handicap tournament is down to the semi-finals, which Mrs. Martin and Mrs. Leslie Savage will play, probably tomorrow. The winner meets Mrs. C. R. Pearsall later in the week and the final play will doubtless draw a good crowd.

The pathetic record of a quarrel, either of the lover kind or of two girls, is recorded in a rather unbecoming in an ad, asking that the scissors, the dinner napkins and the thimble be returned to a certain address. Who knows what tears the napkins may be required to wipe, what wounds the scissors may make or what rents may be mended by means of the thimble? The whole opens up illimitable possibilities of grief.

If the weather fulfills its promise for today there will be innumerable parties in motors leave to spend the day in the surrounding canyons or in some of the outlying good eating places. It is wonderful how some folks have a faculty for finding a splendid country place to eat to which they and their close friends gravitate. There are a number of such near enough to the town to be accessible for motor parties.

One of the most dignified and also hopeless bachelors of the town was seen around the furniture store early in the week in company with, oh such a pretty girl, selecting furniture. Of course this gave rise to sundry and various conclusions, and the little birds that usually hover over such doings spread the news like wildfire. His life at the club has been made a perfect burden since.

Peaches were not the only fruit to be found at Brigham City on the peach day of the week. It is related how one member of the stern sex went to the north in search of a certain peach he had in mind, and secured a lemon instead.

Women's Clubs.

A new impetus is given to club life by the home coming of the president of the state federation, Mrs. Byron Cummings. Mrs. Cummings returns laden with new ideas in regard to the club work to be done and brimming over with enthusiasm.

"I found nothing so absorbing as the industrial question, which may be said to be the main one before the club women of the country today," said Mrs. Cummings. "Indeed, there was such a show of interest after Senator Beveridge's one talk that the women who were most vitally interested hired a hall for a later speech. Of course, the problems brought up in this child labor question are amazing, and no woman could fail to be touched for the
